

The Future of Work - How to Prepare our Clients for Constantly Evolving Work Futures

Lee Brodie, Career Dynamic

Overview

The world of work is in a state of flux, which is causing considerable anxiety to both employers and workers - with good reason. Public debate rages about what work will look like in the future with polarising opinions ranging from the pessimistic to the optimistic.

This presentation will:

- overview the drivers of change
- discuss how they are impacting on the marketplace today
- predict the shape and speed of this disruption into the future.
- The presenter will also:
- discuss the positive roles that career specialists can play in preparing their clients for inevitable change
- suggest a range of ideas, tools and strategies that they could use with their clients

Key Learning Objectives:

- Provide valid facts and information about the predicted future of work and its impact on the workforce
- Explore the proactive role of the career practitioner in making sense of these changes and how they can positively influence, educate and support their clients to survive and thrive in this new world.

Relevance to Conference Themes

Practice: tools, strategies, templates, programmes that deliver results.